Did you know that:

- People with average IQs outperform people with high IQs 70% of the time
- Emotional intelligence has zero relationship with IQ
- Emotional intelligence accounts for about 58% of performance in most jobs
- People with high emotional intelligence make an average of $29,000 more per than people with low emotional intelligence?

And the best part is that, unlike IQ, you CAN substantially increase your emotional intelligence.

According to Travis Bradberry and Jean Graves, authors of Emotional Intelligence 2.0, "Emotional intelligence is your ability to recognize and understand emotions in yourself and others, and your ability to use this awareness to manage your behavior and relationships."

In their bestselling book, Bradberry and Graves describe the Emotional Intelligence framework (including its 4 competencies) and the best strategies and practices to develop those strategies.
